License types

The license types named above cover different extents of use as follows.

Freeware License

A Freeware License allows to use the product free of charge²⁾ on arbitrary computers.

Single License

A Single License allows for firm installation and permanent use²⁾ of the product on one (1) computer of the licensee.

Workplace License

A Workplace License allows for firm installation and permanent use²⁾ of the product on up to two (2) computers of the licensee, for example one PC and one laptop.

Technician License

A Technician License allows one (1) licensee (service technician) to use the product in two ways:

- Firm installation and permanent use²⁾ of the product on up to two (2) computers of the licensee, for example one PC and one laptop.
- Use on arbitrary PCs for reasons on maintenance by the licensee by means of the provided token. The software may be installed firmly on these PCs, but requires the token to be connected in order to run it.

Volume License

A Volume License allows for firm installation and permanent use²⁾ of the product on a certain number of PCs according to the license's particularly granted volume³⁾.

Maintenance License

Allows for use on arbitrary PCs for reasons on maintenance by the licensee by means of the provided token. The software may be installed firmly on these PCs, but requires the token to be connected in order to run it.

¹⁾ Private Licenses comprise the same scope of use, while being limited to non-business use only.

²⁾ In case of time-limited licenses this only applies for the granted validity period. It can be extended upon expiry.

³⁾ The granted volume can be selected when purchasing a Volume License.
